

Two in the Bed

We'd spent an enjoyable evening, with friends who're our delight
When we found the time was late, they asked "Wont you stay the night?
We have a spare room down below where you can lay your head
There's an on-suite there with all mod.cons.and a lovely double bed."

My wife and I were quick to agree, to drive home would be a chore
As fog outside restricted vision to about ten feet – no more
So leaving our friends we went below and started counting sheep
Snuggling in beneath warm sheets we were soon both fast asleep.

Now my wife's a very light sleeper who tosses and turns a lot
And she's always moving in her sleep to my side of the cot
We wakes me up quite often, though she's still fast asleep
And I have to push her gently back –her own side she should keep.

Twas in the middle of this night when I could take no more
She was pushing hard upon me and the sheets were on the floor
A lunging kick in the small of my back gave me the fright of my life
For whoever was in the bed with me, it couldn't be my wife.

She breathed bad breath into my face as her arms went round my neck
She didn't have to push me more – I quickly hit the deck
She was snoring very loudly, sounded like sawing a log
By the light of the moon I could see her face – it was the family dog!

The hundred pound dalmation pup had come into our room
Had found our bed half empty, so climbed in to the warm
I yelled "Get out you crazy mutt, you can't stay in my bed
The place for you is the laundry room or else out in the shed."

She sauntered slowly from the room, her tail between her legs
The look on her face was appealing, like a poor child who begs
But I wouldn't share my bed with her, Never! Not on your life!
I closed the door and began to search the basement for my wife.

I found her in the washroom and said "Are you OK?"
She said " I am but tell me please the dog has gone away
I've been stuck in this predicament twenty minutes or more
When I wanted to leave, I couldn't for their dog was guarding the door."

"She wouldn't heed my pleading when I tried to coax her out
And I was afraid we'd wake everyone if I had started to shout
So I sat here in a quandry wondering what to do
It seemed I'd have to spend all night stuck here in the loo."

I took her quietly back to bed and we snuggled up real tight
While I told her of the other female by my side that night
She started to laugh and giggle and I could sleep no more
If ever you stay in a house with a dog – be sure to close the door!
